The legacy of The Garden Restaurant dates back to 1914, four years after the completion of the prestigious Hotel Utah. The hotel's general manager spared no expense in constructing the magnificent rooftop gardens. The Italian Corinthian columns and rose garden pergola were signature to The Starlight Gardens, the rooftop restaurant. An entertainment stage was placed aside a lily pond at the north end of the garden.

Today, The Garden Restaurant takes on a distinct resemblance to the grandeur that The Starlight Gardens created. The columns and rose pergolas that were signature to The Starlight Gardens still adorn today's restaurant. The Garden's retractable glass roof is reminiscent of canvas coverings that shielded early patrons from the elements. And, of course, the stirring views of Temple Square and the Salt Lake Valley that enchanted the socialites of the early 20th century still inspire today's guests.

The Garden Restaurant management and staff are delighted to share with you these remarkable, historic surroundings. We hope to continue "The Garden Legacy" by creating many memorable dining experiences for all our guests.
